A Radical Change.

Fred. Douglass found one of his warm-est supporters for confirmation as U. S. Marshal for the District of Columbia in General Morgan, the new Democratic Senator from Alabama. While our General Morgan, the new Democratic Senator from Alabama. While our West Virginia Senators, Davis and Hereford, felt called upon to vote against the confirmation. General Morgan not only time of New Hampshire to repeal the law endirmation. General Morgan not only time of New Hampshire to repeal the law endirmation. General Morgan not only time of New Hampshire to repeal the law endired the confirmation. confirmation, General Morgan not only voted for it, but made an eloquent speech in favor of it. This position and peech of the Alabama Senator are all the nore remarkable from the fact that he had been represented prior to his adnission to the Senate as a Bourbon of the that, with him at least, Bourbonism was forever dead. "It was an simpassioned burst of eloquence in favor of President Hayes, Southern policy of equality of all American citizens before the law. He said that he knew not what course others might take, but as for himself he should vote heartily and earnestly for the confirmation of Mr. Douglass, he himself had been a Presidential elector. He had received 10,000 votes of colored men, and it did not lie in him, when a representative man of their race was mominated to the American Senate for confirmation to an article published in the Allia that morning, alluding in a humorons way to Hayes' connection with the investigation of the tconduct of a police officer, threatening in case of a refusal to shoot him. McComb knocked him down, chastisted him severely, took away his pissel, where a charge of assault with a deadly weapon was entered against him. The affair seems likely to prove more serious than was supposed. Hayes indicates his limited to the American Senate for confirmation to the American Senate for confirmation to an office he was well qualified to hold, to selection the same of the same o deepest dye, and committed to all the to an office he was well qualified to hold. to vote against him. He knew not how he could justify such a vote in justice or honor, or go to the colored people of the South again and ask their suffrages, and more than that, he saw a new light break. ing upon his country from the North. He had read the letter of acceptance and the inaugural of President Hayes. He had seen by his acts that he (Hayes) was sincere and honest to his purpose, and he for himself had determined to cast no vote against any worthy nomination which this administration might make and to place no obstacle in the way of the successful accomplishment of the patriot-ic purposes of the inaugural."

Morgan was not the only Southern Senator that voted for Douglass' confirmation. Ben Hill, of Georgia, Garland, of Arkansas, and Senator Withers of Virginia, voted the same way, and Lamar, of Georgia, would have done so had he been able to be present. The Cincinnati Enquirer (which is very bitter against the idea of Southern Senators supporting the new administration) says that "several Southern Senators who are in the Southern harloting movement withheld their viewk."

The Wheeling Savings Institu-

As a matter of interest to a large num ber of our readers, we publish this morn ing the decision of the Supreme Court o Appeals of West Virginia in the case of Peter Zinn, representing many of the de-positors of the Wheeling Savings Institution, against the Directors of that an fortunate concern. The decision was rendered last fall, but it has never been made public before, and we are indebted O. S. Long, Clerk of the Court, for the full text as published this morn-

For ourselves we never had a doubt a to what ought to be the decision in the ease referred to, on the basis of facts as we understood them, which were, in a word, that the Directors had procured the usual prescribed examination into the affairs of the bank only a few weeks be fore the default of the cashier was discovered and found nothing wrong. the Court of Appeals took much broader ground than this in their decision, and hold that directors can not be held liable for simple negligence of duty, but only for fraudulent conduct.

This to many may seem untenable ground. We are not going to argue whether it is or not. The court gives its reasons for taking such ground and we refer all who feel interested in the subject to the argument as presented. It certainly throws a very wide mantle of protection over bank directors-wider perhaps than many of them would ask for-but not perhaps wider than well ascertained considerations of public policy demand. The position of a bank director is generally peaking a thankless and unenviable pe sition, and if it was once understood to carry with it personal liability to the stockholders, or, to the public, for what might be construed as negligence of duty, few men—in fact none at all—would be found to accept such a position.

As a rule, it ought to be considered a fair discharge of duty on the part of a bank director when he takes the same care of other peoples stock or deposits that he takes of his own. If he loses hy over confidence in the Cashier, or by not looking sharply into the affairs of the bank, and other people lose likewise, and there is no taint of fraud attaching to his neglect, the verdict should be that all are in the same boat and all should share

Few bank directors have much time to give to watching bank officers, or bank business in general. They have their hands and heads full of their own private business, and when they come together week to hear a cashier's statement they must of necessity take a great deal for granted. It cannot be otherwise. The average bank director has only a dim sort of a comprehension of what is really going on all week in his bank. He knows considerable about it and yet not very nuch after all. He is always on the surface, and has neither the time nor the inclination, and perhaps not the ability, to go deep down into the recesses of the yaults and the books. He knows the cashier and the clerks, and has confidence that things are going on honestly and intelligently, and is fine. going on honestly and intelligently, and is willing to risk his interests in their

This salute provides for the summary evic-tion of any person intruding himself to a public office, by warrants issued by a Circuit Judge. The party evicted under such warrants, is authorized by the statute to assert his claim or pretensions in the courts if he wishes, but he must give way at once, on the issue and presenta-tion of a warrant to the officers elected.

Important to Life Insurance Companies.

Louisville, March 19.—In the case of Susie Jackson against Mound City Life Insurance Company, of St. Louis, the jury to-day found a verdict for the defendant. Geo. N. Jackson, plaintill's husband, was cashier in the U. S. Revenue Collector's office in 1875. A defaication was discovered amounting to $60,000. Jackson was suspected, but died before his guilt could be proven. An examination revealed arsenie in the stomach, and upon this fact the insurance company contested the payment of the policy, claiming suicide as the grounds for their action. The trial of this case caused much attention.

Frederick Douglass was this afternoon qualified as U. S. Marshal for the District of Columbia and took charge of the office. Columbia Alexander, of Washington, and George Hill, of Georgetown, united with him in the execution of a bond of $20,000 for the faithful performance of his duties. A large number of applicants for office under the new Marshal were in attendance before he was requalified, but Mr. Douglass promptly intimated that he was not in favor of removing any good men from their present positions, and would make no changes without careful consideration. The vacancy caused by the resignation of Col. Phillips, who has been for twenty-five years Chief Deputy Marshal, was to-day filled by the appointment of L. P. Williams, who for many years has been assistant clerk of the Supreme Court of the District. This selection is regarded generally with very great approbation by the bar and the publicat large.
